

CLINTON'S CALL TO TIGER SENT TO VOICE MAIL PURGATORY

By PAUL MILLER

THE SCENE was carried on television around the world: Tiger Woods leaving the interview room Sunday — a cell phone tucked firmly under his chin — after his unbelievable 15-stroke triumph in the U.S. Open at Pebble Beach.

"That was my cell phone and Tiger was talking to the President," said RJ Harper, a Pebble Beach official who served as director of the U.S. Open.

It was a call that almost didn't happen, according to Harper. Even the President of the United States — who can utilize a sophisticated, super-secret communications network when he needs to — is sometimes left at the mercy of that modern hell called voice mail.

"Two weeks before the tournament I was notified by the White House communications office that the President would want to talk to the winner of the U.S. Open as soon as it was over," Harper said. "I told them I'd be with the

Insurance company totals dog

By MARY BROWNFIELD

JACARANDA IS lucky to be alive, but to the insurance company, she's a total loss.

The English pointer belonging to Carmel City Planner Chip Rerig and his wife, Caren Braby, was run over by a car as she lay in the sun next to her own car in a Moss Landing parking lot, sustaining two broken legs, two broken hips, a pelvis separated from her spine and numerous cuts and scratches from being dragged by the car. She underwent two emergency surgeries costing $6,400.

"We filed a police report and a claim against the driver's insurance company," Rerig said. "He admitted fault, and they said, 'We are 75 percent liable, so we will pay for 75 percent ... of a new dog.'"

A pedigreed English pointer can be bought for about $300, according to Rerig — a far cry from the vet bills they have had to pay.

"If the offer would have come in to pay 75 percent of the vet bills, that would have been a very reasonable offer," he said. "We are certainly willing to pay some out-of-pocket expenses, as well as the future costs, as this is going to complicate her old age to some degree."

Rerig has pleaded with OrionAuto Inc. and its parent company, Royal and SunAlliance Insurance Group, to rethink its decision.

"We have statements from the state police and all the people who saw it, and everybody's just saying, 'Come on, there's some liability here. Do what's right,'" he said.

OrionAuto Inc. claims representative Victoria Hogan — who handled Rerig's claim — was unavailable for comment on the case.

But other companies might treat such an incident differently. A State Farm Insurance claims specialist refused to discuss how such a case would be handled, but a AAA claims specialist said she believed the company would offer to cover a percentage of the incurred expenses if its policyholder was found to be responsible

CUSD gets tough on phony residents

By TAMARA GRIPPI

TIRED OF footing the bill for the education of students from other cities, the Carmel Unified School District is now requiring every parent to sign an affidavit swearing they live in the district.

In addition, parents will be required to back up their sworn statements with proof — including three of the following: a Monterey County tax bill, a PG&E bill, current DMV vehicle registration, a canceled check or a proof of residency from the county registrar of voters.

In a letter mailed June 7, CUSD officials informed parents that the district spent several hundred thousand dollars educating non-resident students last year.

The district also spent "a significant amount of money to reduce class size at Carmel Middle School," only to have its efforts thwarted by an unexpected influx of students, explained Howard Given, school board president. Concerned by the number of reported non-residents attending Carmel schools, the district hired an investigator to follow up on suspicious cases last year.

"No one in the district enjoys dealing with pursuing interdistrict transfers," Given said. "It can be an emotional issue. But it's not fair for people who live here to subsidize people who don't. It puts a burden on the entire system."

This year, the school board decided it was necessary to take enforcement a step further. School officials hear about out-of-district students from many sources, oftentimes from the students themselves, Given said.

"With all the cities on the Peninsula, it's still a small community," Given said. "People kind of know who the people are."

One reason Carmel Unified suffers from non-resident enrollment is that the district does not receive additional funding from the state for students who live elsewhere, according to Given.

Other districts, including Monterey Unified, are "revenue dis-

Oily globs mar Carmel Beach

Carmel Public Works Director Jim Cullem retrieves one of numerous solidified oil patches that washed up on Carmel Beach this week.

RUBBERY CLUMPS of tar that washed up on Carmel Beach this week might be either hardened crude oil or bunker fuel that was discharged by a passing ship, said Carmel Public Works Director Jim Cullem, who collected several samples of the material June 20.

He hopes state officials will scrutinize the black, solidified patches that smell strongly of oil in an attempt to discover their source.

The oil clumps — more than a dozen — were discovered by beachgoers at two locations along the beach — near 10th Avenue as well as at the north end of the beach between Pescadero Creek and Pebble Beach's 9th Hole.

Vinz Koller, who spotted the oil patches in the surf and on the beach June 19, said many of the patches were as large as "two feet long by one-half foot wide."

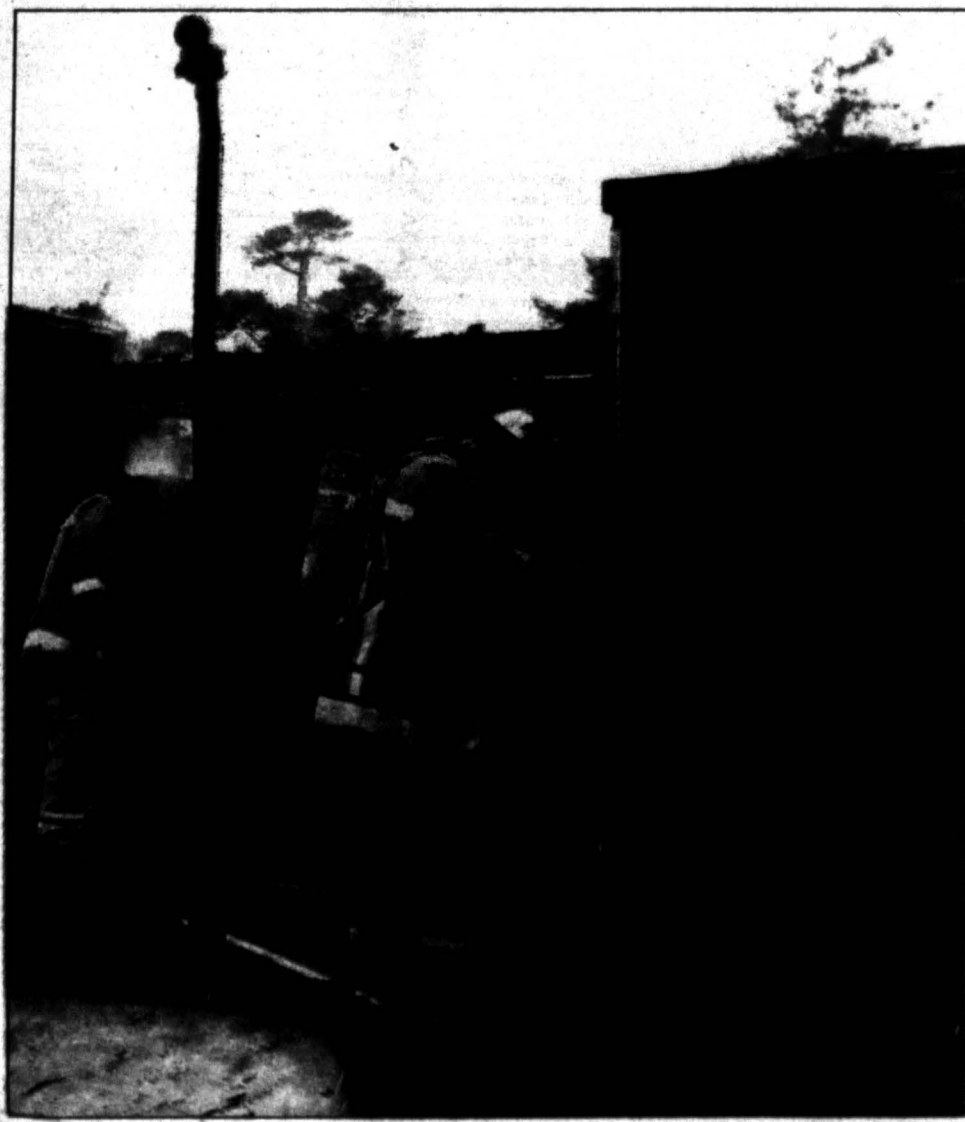

The "tarry, rubbery patches rolling in the surf and washed up on the sand smelled just like nasty oil," Koller said.

However, when Cullem — who didn't receive a report of the oil until the next day — inspected the beach, those patches had broken down into smaller clumps ranging from two to five inches wide.

"God only knows where it got in the water and when," Cullem said. Sometimes this [material] can come from a wreck — a ship could have been out there for 40 years.

After walking along the beach earlier this week, Carmel residents Clayton and Linda Anderson found the black oily substance all over

Alleged mugger caught by concerned Carmelite

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A CARMEL man and a Menlo Park visitor chased down and caught a 15-year-old Seaside boy who had allegedly knocked down an elderly New Jersey woman and snatched her purse in downtown Carmel, according to Carmel Detective Sgt. Pete Poitras.

The youth reportedly snuck up behind the 65-year-old woman as she walked down Fifth at Dolores Street around 6:15 the evening of June 17, shoved her to the ground and stole her purse, he said.

"He apparently took a bus to this area and then wandered around looking for a potential victim, and found one," Poitras said.

The woman's husband immediately gave chase and Menlo Park resident Christopher Scarborough — driving a car nearby — decided to help, according to Poitras.

"He saw the suspect running and being chased by the husband," he said.

The two pursued the alleged attacker down Fifth Avenue and up Lincoln Street, until he jumped a fence and took off down a hill. He ended up in the yard of Monte Verde resident Norman Rial, who caught the boy and held him until police arrived, Poitras reported.

"The kid dove over a fence, and they held him for us," he said.

Poitras applauded the husband's quick action and the help offered by the two bystanders, particularly that of Rial.

"We are pleased with his quick thinking and willingness to become involved in a police matter," Poitras said. "With his help, we were able to take the suspect into custody with minimum effort."

The victim was taken to Community Hospital for treatment of several bruises, some pulled muscles and swelling on her right hip and was released, according to Poitras.

The alleged attacker — whose name was not released because of his age — was detained to await arraignment, according to Poitras.

The robbery was the second attack in Carmel in two weeks. On June 4 an armed robber confronted an Oakland woman and her granddaughter in a hotel parking lot. A suspect for that crime was also arrested.

Fighting crime requires cooperation between police and residents, Poitras said.

"It's only through the cooperative efforts of citizens and police that we can hope to effectively deal with crime in our community," he said. "This does point out the necessity of the citizens of Carmel to be ever vigilant."

Police generally do not recommend that citizens try to apprehend criminals. But "this guy Rial really took the bull by the horns," Poitras said.

CARPET ROBBERY RINGLEADER PLEADS GUILTY

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE RINGLEADER of the gang of robbers who hauled away a hundred-year-old carpet worth $200,000 from Conway of Asia in 1994 pleaded guilty to three federal offenses in a San Jose courtroom June 8.

Rubert Williams

Rubert "Bump" Williams, 36, pleaded guilty to two counts of violating the Hobbes Act — interference with interstate commerce — as well as one count of use of a firearm, according to Carmel Detective Sgt. Pete Poitras.

Williams, who was arrested in Texas earlier this year, will be sentenced by a federal judge Sept. 26.

"He's going to receive a minimum sentence of 19 years," Poitras said.

Poitras said the involvement of the FBI — particularly the work of special agent Kevin Lammons — was crucial to solving the case.

"We could not have seen results as positive without the FBI," Poitras said. "I took the case as far as I could take it and handed it off to him [Lammons]," Poitras said. "He stuck to it for five years."

Williams' sentence will be determined primarily by a formula — which takes into account such factors as criminal history, violence and the dollar amount lost — established by recently approved federal sentencing guidelines, according to Lammons.

"People sentenced under the new guidelines will serve almost the entire amount of time given," said Lammons. "If you get 19 years in prison, you'll more than likely do 18 years."

The 1994 robbery at Conway of Asia was one of four similar crimes committed in West Hollywood and San Mateo, as well as an attempted robbery in Newport Beach, which were all traced to Williams' gang, police said.

Williams is the last of 10 people involved in the robberies to be convicted, Lammons said. The ringleader was able to elude police until last January when he was caught in Texas, where he was allegedly involved in a credit card fraud ring.

During business hours

On Feb. 2, 1994, two armed men entered Conway of Asia on Dolores Street, pulled out handguns and forced all three employees to lie face down in the back room, where they were bound and gagged.

The men loaded a yellow Ryder van with six rugs totaling $213,000. One of those rugs, a hundred-year-old carpet woven for the Baktari King, was worth over $200,000, according to Conway of Asia owner Peterson Conway.

After searching rug stores and auctions between Carmel and Hong Kong, Conway finally recovered his prize carpet in a New York City store.

Police believe Williams planned the rug store robberies from a Los Angeles base. During his investigation of the case, Poitras began tracking down leads in the other cities and convinced a member of Williams' gang to become an informant.

At that point, Poitras handed the case over to the FBI — the only agency that had jurisdiction over the cases in four different California counties.

Lammons said solving the crimes has taken "some really dangerous people" off the street. "Some of these people were significant crime problems in my opinion," he said.

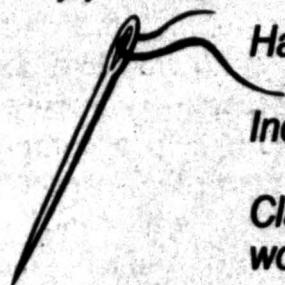

Poitras said he was pleased that "virtually everyone involved was sentenced one way or another."

"This brings to a close one of the most egregious and sensational crimes to have occurred in Carmel in my 20 years," Poitras said.

Bartender takes 19th hole too far

A BARTENDER from Sacramento hired to help satisfy thirsty crowds at the U.S. Open last week may have succumbed to the one-for-you-one-for-me habit. Monterey County Sheriff's deputies were called after the man was seen allegedly trying to run people down with a golf cart Sunday night after the U.S. Open. He was arrested at the 18th green shortly after Tiger Woods' final putt.

According to deputy Pete Dainty, Stephen Osborne was reported to be so drunk that he constantly fell out of the golf cart he was driving. By the time Dainty arrived, the cart had been taken away from the man, who had urinated on himself, according to Dainty. He arrested the bacchanal bartender for being drunk in public.

"We got a call that some guy was on a golf cart driving around trying to hit people, and he kept falling off the cart," Dainty said. "And when I asked him how many beers he'd had, he said he'd only had two."

'Big guns' of raccoon roundworm quandary coming to town

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE MAJOR players in the raccoon roundworm debate — including San Jose State microbiologist William Murray and Monterey County Health Director Robert Melton — will be on hand to advise the Carmel City Council July 11.

Mayor Sue McCloud

Other experts who will answer questions at the council meeting include Curtis Fritz of the state's vector control branch and county epidemiologist Kathy LeMoine.

After Murray presents the findings of his Carmel and Pacific Grove raccoon latrine study — which show 48 percent of the soil samples test positive for the deadly parasite Baylisascaris procyonis — and the other experts respond, the council is scheduled to decide how to best tackle the problem.

"We have to hear what they [experts] have to say," said Carmel Mayor Sue McCloud. "At minimum, it's a people problem. We have got to do a continuous education program directed toward the commercial district, tourists, the permanent residents and second-home owners."

No declaration yet

Melton, who was asked by the city council last August to declare a health emergency in Carmel, said he won't be announcing a decision at the July 11 meeting.

The county health officer is waiting to see Murray's complete analysis of the raccoon latrine study, which should be published in a scientific journal later this year.

While the declaration of a health emergency is necessary for the city to pursue a trapping program based on health concerns, the city is also entitled to adopt a trapping program under state fish and game regulations — much like the program Pacific Grove has had in place for several years.

In Pacific Grove, trapped raccoons are euthanized with carbon dioxide gas, which is the same method commonly used to "put to sleep" and euthanize unwanted cats and dogs.

None of the Carmel City Council members have yet committed themselves to being for or against a trapping program in Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Last week, city officials confirmed that Murray's study could help speed the environmental review necessary to adopt a legal trapping program under fish and game codes.

Questions and answers

McCloud said she also wants to give citizens a chance to ask questions of the experts, but is not yet sure what kind of forum will take shape. The health officers will advise the council during "extraordinary business" at the beginning of the meeting while the council's actual decision is slated later on the agenda.

"We have an extraordinary problem for which we need to find an extraordinary means," McCloud said.

Local officials and residents first became concerned about the raccoon threat after a Pacific Grove toddler accidentally ingested roundworm eggs in 1998 and suffered catastrophic damage to his brain and eyesight.

Scientists have said the Monterey Peninsula has far more raccoons than it should — largely because the raccoons are intentionally fed or find plenty to eat in garbage containers and pet dishes.

There have been 12 documented cases of raccoon roundworm infection in humans — including four fatalities — in the U.S. in recent years, according to Murray.

In California, there have been at least three cases since 1992.

Raccoons are also considered a dangerous nuisance by many Carmelites who have been attacked themselves or have had their homes invaded or their pets killed by the animals.

The July 11 council meeting will begin at 3:30 p.m. in the city council chambers.

PG civic center initiative may have legal problems

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

THE PACIFIC Grove City Council decided June 21 to put an initiative aimed at stopping the town's civic center project on the Nov. 7 ballot, but also asked City Attorney George Thatcher to figure out what the initiative would actually accomplish and whether it is legal.

"We only had two choices — to enact the ordinance right away or put it to a vote," Mayor Sandy Koffman said. "So we asked that a resolution be prepared to put it on the November ballot, but we have some questions about how the initiative would work."

The measure went to the city council after petitions got 1,232 valid signatures from Pacific Grove voters.

The initiative — which was enthusiastically backed by Susan Goldbeck, publisher of a Pacific Grove bi-monthly newspaper, The Beacon — targets the city's plan for a new civic center, which would upgrade City Hall and provide new offices for city staff.

Goldbeck, who has bitterly attacked city officials in her newspaper, has also announced her intention to run for mayor in November.

But the initiative doesn't directly ask voters whether they want the civic center built. Legal deadlines have long since passed for challenging the city's decision to go ahead with the civic center, which drew little public opposition as it made its way through the city's permit process in the 1990s.

Instead, the initiative would require a vote of the people for all "city construction projects costing over $400,000."

If the initiative is successful, another ballot measure would presumably be required at a subsequent election to ask the voters if they support the civic center. Other ballot measures would be required for all later projects that will cost more than $400,000 over a two-year period.

Koffman said the council wants to know if such a broadly worded measure would amount to the council surrendering its legislative authority.

She said the council also wants to know what the effect would be if a large donation were received, for example, to upgrade the city's library.

"There are a number of problems with the measure," Thatcher said. He will be advising the council next month what steps they can take to challenge its legality in court.

their shoes.

"This is the first time in 12 to 15 years I've seen something like this," Clayton Anderson said. Cullem agreed that during his long career with the city, he hadn't before dealt with oil on Carmel's beach.

Since the foul discovery, Cullem has sent out public work crews to comb the entire beach, looking for the oily substance. So far, only a few more pieces have surfaced.

All the local agencies concerned with oil spills — including fish and game and the Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary — are monitoring the situation.

"We're waiting for the information to develop," said Larry Espinosa, an environmental specialist with fish and game. "Before we can mount a spill response we need about a barrel of oil."

Oil clumps washing up on the beach don't necessarily indicate that any laws have been broken, officials said.

"There are some exceptions for oil to be discharged outside the three mile limit," Espinosa said. "There are allowances for boats to clean tanks and discharge waste at sea, which can have surprising consequences."

Biologists believe that the hardened oil is probably not harmful. "If oil is spilled at sea, over time it weathers and becomes a tarry material," said Patrick Cotter, environmental scientist for the sanctuary. "It bakes and the volatile chemicals evaporate."

"It's probably harmless," Cullem said. "But it is unsightly."

Ironically, the U.S. Coast Guard held a "tar ball" drill with Monterey and Pacific Grove, just a week before real tar balls washed up on Carmel Beach, Cotter said.

Clean up of such an incident can be as simple as using rakes and shovels or as sophisticated as a "skimming vessel."

tricts" and receive a dollar amount from the state based on average daily attendance, Given said.

As Carmel schools gain recognition for educational excellence — including two Carmel grammar schools that received the highest academic ranking from the state last February — they become more and more attractive to Peninsula residents whose schools don't match up.

The recent school bond victory — which makes $20 million available to improve the infrastructure of Carmel schools — will likely draw even more students from other districts, Given said.

One Seaside mother, who did not want to be identified, is desperately trying to get her son out of her town's school district and into Carmel schools because her son has been given drugs and accosted by gang members as he walked home from school, she said

CHS vandals damage more than just property

THE ORIGINAL $15,000 to $20,000 estimate for damage at Carmel High School caused by vandals June 8 is too high, according to Monterey County Sheriff's Deputy John Burke.

But the emotional distress suffered by students outweighs the monetary cost of two overturned auto shop junkers, four cut-down maple trees and property damaged by spray-painted graffiti.

"They chopped down four of the maple trees — that's being vindictive and vicious," said Burke, referring to trees planted in the school's center courtyard as a memorial. "I've heard through some in administration that that upset a lot of the students."

The school's head custodian discovered the mess early the morning of June 8, a day before graduation, and reported to the sheriff's department that two cars had been taken from the school's auto shop and tipped on their sides in the courtyard. Derogatory slurs were also spray-painted throughout the school, according to Burke, in addition to the chopped-down trees.

"Both the vehicles pushed up into the hallways were auto shop vehicles given to the school for tear and repair," he said. "They had no real monetary value."

The school simply hired a tow service to remove the vehicles and take them back to the shop, he said. The spray-painted insults have also been removed. No plans have yet been made to replant the maples, according to a school official, but she said she was sure the trees would eventually be replaced.

As for the culprits, Burke said he doubted students from other schools were responsible.

"We don't know who they are for sure, but I suspect they're students from this school," he said. "The investigation continues."

Music students acquire trophies aplenty

By TAMARA GRIPPI

CARMEL MIDDLE School's instrumental musicians and choir received first place trophies and numerous other awards during the Music in the Parks festival at Paramount's Great America May 20.

The school's orchestra, directed by Karen King, captured the first place prize for its performance of the Overture to "The Marriage of Figaro" by Mozart and the Finale from the Second Symphony by Tchaikovsky.

The choir — which performed the American folk song "The Water is Wide" and the Latin piece "Gaudeamus Hodie" — won the first place trophy in treble choir as well as the judge's choice trophy in the overall choral category.

In addition, the jazz band was awarded a second place trophy and the concert band earned a fourth place prize. All the groups received excellent and superior ratings.

"This is the first year they've participated and we're really happy they did so well their first time," said Glenda Bernhardt, the choral music director at the middle school.

After performing at Milpitas High School, the students spent the afternoon having fun at the amusement park. In the evening, they received their trophies at an awards ceremony at Paramount Theater in the park.

Music students at Carmel High School also claimed top honors during the Music Festival at Sea — a cruise which took the students from Los Angeles to Ensenada, Mexico.

While the jazz band received a gold medal, both the orchestra and concert band received silver medals. All three groups were directed by Brian Handley.

The concert choir, also directed by Bernhardt, won a silver medal.

After 28 years, Carmel's cartoonist moves out

By TAMARA GRIPPI

CARMEL'S CARTOONIST Bill Bates — who received an eviction notice last month — will be able to stay on the Peninsula, but not in the quirky seaside village he captures so well in his art.

Bates, his wife, Lei Lei, and their 7-year-old daughter, Chelsea, moved into a new place in Monterey just under the June 15 deadline set by Bates' former landlord.

The move marks the first time Bates has lived outside the Carmel area in 28 years, the artist said.

"I've been here since 1972 — Carmel's a part of me," Bates said. "But we just could not afford [to stay] in Carmel."

The Pine Cone's longtime cartoonist said he still plans to come into his beloved town every day to meet with friends, scope out material for his cartoons and, of course, pick up his mail at the Carmel Post Office, which is adorned with some of Bates' most memorable drawings.

He will also stay active in the weekly coffee group of artists and writers who have been meeting in downtown Carmel cafes for 21 years — and will continue to amuse Pine Cone readers with his "only in Carmel" cartoons.

Bates, who served as the official artist documenting the Queen Elizabeth II's 106-day voyage around the world from early January to late April, came home to an eviction letter posted to his door. His landlord had decided to sell.

Bates scrambled to find a new place but soon realized that renting a home in Carmel was out of his budget.

When asked about the irony of Carmel's popular figure — who was honored in 1998 with an official "humor zoning district" dedicated to him by the city council — squeezed out of town, Bates remained optimistic.

"When the market goes down, maybe I can afford to come back," he said, laughing. "I'll be waiting on this side of the hill for the bottom to fall out of the market."

CONFLAGRATION DESTROYS CARMEL ROOFTOP RESTAURANT

FLAMES ERUPTED from the rooftop patio of Piatti Ristorante on Sixth Avenue in Carmel around 4 p.m. Thursday, destroying the courtyard, tables, chairs and heaters, but leaving the dining room below unscathed. The restaurant was closed at the time and no one was injured in the fire.

Peninsula fire departments to receive tax money

By MARY BROWNFIELD

MONTEREY PENINSULA fire protection districts and volunteer fire departments will receive their shares of nearly $2 million in tax revenue — money they plan to use for operating costs, public education and facilities upgrades — the Monterey County Board of Supervisors decided June 13.

The money, $1.85 million, comes to public safety and

See FIRE DEPARTMENTS page 5B

According to Assistant Carmel Fire Chief John Willett, a passerby stopped at the Carmel fire house just down the street to point out the black smoke pouring from the rooftop of the nearby restaurant.

Willett said he thought it might be from the incinerator at Bruno's Market across Junipero Street until he saw the thick smoke himself.

Two engines responded by driving one block up Sixth Avenue, while two more arrived later from the Cypress Fire Protection District station on Carmel Hill. Carmel police blocked off surrounding streets while firefighters hauled a hose up the restaurant's stairs and ran a ladder to the roof from a firetruck below. They doused the flames within minutes.

Willett said the fire originated in a plastic trash can in a corner of the rooftop patio. The trash can's melted remains were found among the burned floor boards. Willett could not say if a discarded cigarette was the ignition source.

Locating the spot where the fire started wasn't difficult, Willett said, pointing to severe "alligatoring" of the wall, indicating the most severe heat.

Damage was estimated at 50 to 75 thousand dollars.

for the accident.

Jacaranda, almost 5 years old, was tied with a six-foot leash to a Subaru wagon with its hatch open parked in the private parking lot at Moss Landing Marine Labs, Rerig said, while a dog-sitting friend was inside the lab working.

"Her head was near the back wheel and her hiney was sticking out, and that's what got run over," Rerig said.

But his dog wasn't in the way of passing cars, he said. The man, reportedly driving quickly through the lot on his way to an adjacent private business, must have driven very close to the car to hit her, according to Rerig.

An X-ray shows the results of two surgeries: one steel plate and eight steel and titanium screws. Jacaranda's right hip constantly dislocated, forcing the vet to remove part of the bone.

"He actually ran over her, and dragged her along the ground," he said. "Everybody heard her screaming bloody murder, and all the scientists ran out and took her to a vet," he said.

A few days and two surgeries later, Jacaranda began recovery with a stainless steel plate in her left hip and eight steel and titanium screws in her pelvis. A veterinary surgeon had to cut the femoral head off her right leg bone because it wouldn't stay in the hip socket, according to Rerig.

"That joint's now held together by muscle," he said. She also sustained sciatic nerve damage in her left leg.

It will take about four months for Jacaranda's pain to subside, according to Rerig, but she will never be the same.

"They expect she'll always have a hitch in her giddy-up," he said. "She won't be racing dogs on the beach again."

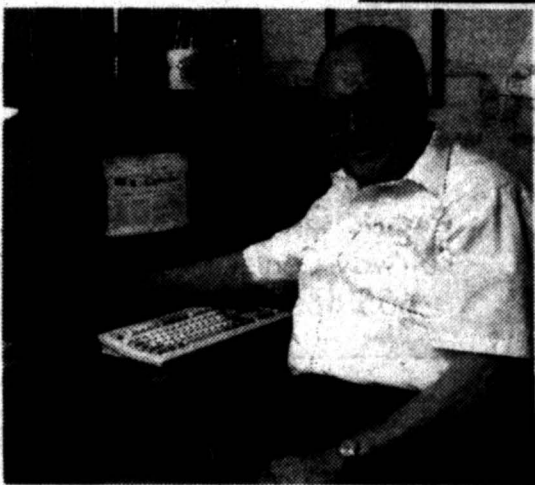

In the meantime, Rerig and his wife help their dog get around the yard by holding her hind end in a sling. A group of friends bought a red Radio Flyer wagon — complete with knobby tires — so that Jacaranda can visit the beach, even if she can't get out and play.

And throughout it all — the expenses, the time off to help with Jacaranda's supervision and rehabilitation, the multiple trips to the vet, the worry, and a future of uncertain health — Rerig said he and his wife never considered euthanizing her.

"Dogs are part of the family, they really are, and she is our child for all intents and purposes," he said. "We take her places, we do things with her, and she is an integral part of our life."

"I couldn't go out and buy another dog as a replacement for her."

Carmel Valley

100-mile endurance ride will test C.V. woman's mettle

By MARY BROWNFIELD

ALEXANDRA NORTH is not the average, Garland Park weekend-trail-ride kind of horseback rider. The Carmel Valley resident makes her full-time CPA job fit around riding horses, rather than the other way around, and, to prove her mettle in the saddle, she will compete in a 100-mile endurance ride next month on her big chestnut Arabian mare, CV Butter Bea.

"I started my own business Aug. 1 just so I could do this — because I found that employers are really unforgiving about time off," said the 39-year-old, who has been riding since she was 8. "All through tax season, I was riding like crazy, and I would work through the night or when it was raining, filing returns on my computer. We endurance riders are possessed."

Adding a twist to North's attempt at conquering 100 miles of single-track, Pony Express trails through old mining country from Truckee to Auburn in less than 24 hours is the fact that she has multiple sclerosis, which often leaves her exhausted, dizzy, in pain and sometimes even numb.

"Weird stuff happens when you have MS," she said.

Fatigue is her biggest challenge. When she was diagnosed in 1992, just after she began endurance riding, her doctors asked her to stop.

"They wanted me to quit because when it's hot I lose my equilibrium," she said. "They were more concerned about me falling off than they were about my MS, but I have managed to survive."

And she didn't quit.

"It's gotten to the point where sometimes I climb up on the horse and fall off the other side because I can't tell which way is up," she said. She even trained her black Arabian stallion to lie down so that she could crawl up on his back.

Over time, North learned to control her symptoms not through conventional medicine but with the help of an herbalist, she said. She even used herbs to calm her Tevis Cup horse, once known around her stable as "The Bomb" because she was so dangerous and unpredictable.

"She had been kicked off the race track for bad behavior," she said of the mare, which was found to be completely lacking estrogen. "It was like having 1,000 pounds of PMS running around — she would crash through fences like they were match sticks."

CV Butter Bea, now affectionately known as the Beamer rather than as The Bomb, came to North in a sorry state.

"She stepped off the trailer covered with tar weeds and nicks — she looked like hell and was a bag of bones but she could really, really trot," she said.

Other riders refused to ride with her because Bea would bite, kick and step off cliffs on trails, according to North.

TIMOTHY FELLOWS, 10, not only has Elizabeth Taylor eyes, he has Cary Grant teeth.

A nightly tooth brushing, after the final meal of the day, keeps Timothy's teeth white and gleaming — his eager acquiescence attributable in no small part to the poultry-flavor of his PetDent.

A daily walk, run and sometimes dip at Carmel Beach or Spanish Bay keeps this charming part-shelty, part-Cavalier King Charles Spaniel trim and vigorous; he neither looks nor acts his age due to Mom Fran's dedication.

Timothy's shelty heritage is evident in his size and in his ears, nose and tail; everything in between is distinctly Cavalier King Charles Spaniel, including the distinctive forehead "thumb print." Add to this a winsome smattering of Shirley MacLaine nose freckles, and you have the handsome, friendly and happy winner photographed and interviewed at Carmel Beach.

One of Timothy's appealing ploys is standing on his hind legs, which, he knows quite well, frequently elicits treats from Carmel shopkeepers when he and Mom go shopping.

After a busy day of running, walking, dipping and conning, and after his nightly dental hygiene is seen to, Timothy retires to Mom Fran and Dad Rowland's room, where he hops into his own bed which sports his name — lest he forget.

"I had people tell me I should shoot her," she said. "I had a trainer tell me a plastic horse from Walmart would be better than her."

Now that her horse has recovered and North has almost nine years of endurance riding under her belt — she has competed in countless 25- and 50-mile rides, and won many — they will tackle the mammoth Tevis Cup July 15.

Of the 250 horses and riders from all over North America and Canada who enter each year, only half finish, according to North — many drop out along the route because of illness or injury.

"People misjudge the gradual downhill, and trot downhill so much that the horses get lame in their shoulders" she said.

The route includes two steep canyons that have to be traversed — one by crossing a swinging bridge over the middle fork of the American River. Riders ascend a total of 18,090 feet and descend a total of 22,970 feet during the course.

"Most of the horses hit the canyons in the heat of the day, when it can be 110 degrees in those canyons," she said.

The Tevis Cup goes to the winning horse and rider, and the Haggin Cup is given to the top horse that survives the 100-mile trek in the best condition.

The Haggin "is sometimes more coveted than winning first place because that means you have the fittest horse — you have taken care of him throughout the race," she said.

Endurance riding favors Arabs over all other breeds — 90 percent of the finishers are Arabian horses, according to North. It also favors women over men.

"The women just eat the men up, especially women over 40," she said. "One rider has over 50,000 miles, and she started when she was 48 and now is 60-something. There are people doing this race who are in their 70s."

North said the sport appeals to her because of the camaraderie between riders — known to lend a hand out on the trail — and the relationship forged between horse and rider.

With less than a month until race time, North has her strategy laid out and her team ready — her crew of four will help her and Bea make it through, she said, even if she finishes on "will power and yelero."

The race includes nine required rest stops along the way where horses receive a quick check-up by a vet.

North's massage therapist — muscle cramping can be a problem, particularly for sufferers of MS — will be on-hand to work out some of the kinks.

Riders start out in Truckee at 5:15 a.m. and usually end

Local ice cream man comes to blows with Ben & Jerry's

By MARY BROWNFIELD

FRANK ENEA Dairies spent 13 years building a local market for Ben & Jerry's, but the Vermont company pulled the plug on Frank Enea's distribution last summer illegally and without justification, according to a complaint filed in Monterey County Superior Court April 24.

"Frank had been distributing Ben & Jerry's for 13 years or more, and essentially built the brand from its infancy when it was not big and famous like it is now," said Sacramento attorney Thomas Casazza. "And as thanks for all this, they cut him off from distribution."

Severing the oral contract the two companies had for more than a decade without cause violates California's franchise act and is bad business, according to Casazza.

California is one of only 11 states that has a law protecting franchisees from being ousted by a company without cause or compensation.

"We are undertaking an action on his behalf to try to get what's owed him," Casazza said, adding that monetary compensation could reach seven figures. "He hopes to be fairly compensated for the 13 years he put in and the profits he would have going forward."

According to the complaint, Enea — best known for distributing Dreyers Grand Ice Cream throughout his territories in Monterey, Santa Cruz, San Benito and Santa Clara counties — built the local market for Ben & Jerry's from nothing to more than $2 million annually.

"Our record is one of the best, per capita," Frank Enea said.

As distributor, Frank Enea Dairies received a percentage of those profits, which accounted for 25 percent of the company's business, according to the suit. The dairy also distributes ice cream products for Berkeley Farms, Lappert's, Starbucks, Godiva, Nestle and Unilever.

In March 1999, Ben & Jerry's sent a letter to Frank Enea Dairies notifying the company that it would no longer be the local distributor for the Vermont ice cream maker as of August 31, 1999. Enea said he was shocked by the move.

It then hired another distributor, according to the suit.

"He built Ben & Jerry's' distribution here from the outset — he devoted 13 years to developing and expanding the marketplace, entering into commercial agreements to develop the brand," Casazza said. "Then once it became successful, they just pulled it without any reason."

San Francisco defense attorneys Kelly Klaus and Malcolm Heinicke petitioned the court to change the location of the lawsuit from Monterey County Superior Court to the U.S. District Court in San Jose, since Ben & Jerry's is located across the country in Vermont, according to Heinicke.

He would not comment further on the suit, but said it will be heard at the U.S. District Court office in San Jose, and will be held to the same California law, he said.

"What's interesting is that Ben & Jerry's sets forth an image of socially conscious individuals — they trade off that image — but they treat distributors in a very different way," Casazza said.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Stuttering, or any other uncontrolled speech pattern may be the butt of many jokes, but for the person who suffers the ailment, it's no laughing matter. People have speech problems for a variety of reasons ranging from early childhood disorders to post operative difficulties, or just as part of the aging process. Psychologically, the best way to help a person with a speech difficulty is to listen, patiently. Do not add stress by hurrying the speaker or completing the sentences. This can cause frustration thereby tightening the throat, mouth, and chest muscles. It's a complicated matter but patience is the best band-aid.

Approval of boundaries next step in Flanders sale

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

THE CARMEL Planning Commission will consider new property lines for Flanders Mansion at its next meeting, allowing the city to initiate the sale of the 75-year-old home.

The proposed boundary lines for the house and surrounding grounds — drawn up by the city's engineer, Clayton Neill — include 1.427 acres.

The Carmel City Council approved conceptual boundary lines for the property last February and directed Neill to complete the more detailed drawings.

Once Flanders' official boundaries — which will separate it from the remaining 10 acres of the Mission Trail Nature Preserve — are approved, the city will take the next step and have the property appraised.

While the historic mansion was last appraised at $1.1 million in 1998, city officials believe its value may have increased significantly since then.

Late last year, the city council ended 27 years of controversy by deciding to sell the landmark structure, which was originally built for Paula and Grace Flanders in 1925.

Several potential buyers have offered to either purchase or lease the Tudor Revival mansion, including former mayor Clint Eastwood and Palo Alto attorney John Paul Hanna.

The planning commission will review Neill's proposed boundaries July 12.

WHO'S PULLING YOUR STRINGS?

Like all prejudices, or hatred without just cause, people don't fess up to the fears in their hearts. We've seen it in the past, now we're seeing it with raccoons.

Let's not pretend this fear is due to a local child contracting a severe neurological condition two years ago. While it is true that this child tragically has a serious disability as a result of an incident two years ago, it is not at all certain that it was from ingestion of raccoon feces from the dirt. This incident created an opportunity for media frenzy; however, the Center for Disease Control said they had no protocols to see what constitutes a case of Baylisascaris (raccoon roundworm) since there is no proven test for it. They realize that their expert gets his grant moneys from Bayer, a corporation that makes the leading roundworm medicine, so his research could be skewed towards magnifying the horrors of roundworms. But, since contracting Baylisascaris is so rare, no one has developed a commercial test, and the only way to obtain grant moneys is through a corporation with a personal interest in both the type and publicity of the results. Eighteen local veterinarians have sent a letter to our officials explaining that it was 10,000 times more likely (literally) that the child contracted his problem from the ingestion of DOG feces (a different roundworm).

Let's remember that ALL mammals, including raccoons, have had roundworms for centuries; this is nothing new—certainly no emergency. Many animals have fecal parasites that can kill or seriously harm humans—dogs, cats and birds to list the most common ones. Even if you killed every living thing around you, you're going to have to live with the fact that if you eat feces, even human feces, you can become seriously ill.

The national average for the percentage of raccoon feces that contains roundworms is similar to that of horses, puppies or kittens—60-80%. A San Jose microbiologist's recent survey showed that 48% of the feces tested in this area harbored roundworms. THIS IS FANTASTIC NEWS! Our raccoons have 20-30% less roundworms than others in the U.S. So why would the Pine Cone continue to present this as evidence for declaring a health emergency? The researcher himself says it doesn't warrant being treated as an emergency. So, let's review: TWO years ago there was an unproven case of Baylisascaris, and now we know that our raccoons have 20-30% fewer parasites than raccoons in the rest of the U.S. Therefore, we must declare it a health "emergency" and kill all the raccoons. Make any sense to you? Me neither.

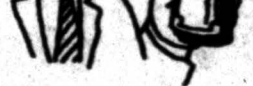

So who do we have screaming, "Kill 'em?" We have people with their own personal agendas: Vector Control and trappers, who make money from killing raccoons; researchers earning grant moneys propagating the horrors of roundworm; politicians seeking popularity vs. being the voice of reason and an opportunity for a media frenzy...well, you get the idea.

What is motivating some people to declare war on raccoons? I would say it's people who are prejudiced or misled or who believe all their problems will be solved with no effort on their part, if they can just get rid of those scapegoats, I mean raccoons. Our officials must not allow MOB RULE to prevail—let's try to abide by, "peace and justice for ALL—yes, ALL beings, both human and animal." Be a little tolerant of raccoons and other wildlife—soften your hearts, open your eyes, and don't let people and companies with their own personal agendas turn all of us into a mob of hatred and injustice.

Carmel Host Lions Club installs roster of new officers

VISITORS' DRIVING Guide for Carmel-by-the-Sea:

-STOP SIGN: Drive right through the intersection, keeping your eyes focused straight ahead. Wearing earplugs to protect your sensibilities from irate drivers who don't know any better is highly recommended.

-NO STOP SIGN: Come to a complete stop before driving through. Ignore the thump from the car behind you; the driver's obviously not familiar with the rules.

People and Places

By Sissi Maleki

-PEDESTRIAN CROSSING MARKS: Come to a complete stop ONLY when there are no pedestrians within a mile.

(Those wandering leaves can be deceptive.) Otherwise, assume cars always have the right of way, human body obstacles or not.

-25 mph SPEED LIMIT ZONE: This simply reflects a bureaucratic typo in which they left out the zero at the end of the "25." Ignore the typo.

Most important: DO NOT, under any circumstances, turn your headlights on before midnight. Our endangered Monterey pines don't care for the limelight.

Don't worry — you'll catch on quickly. I did.

ON JUNE 20TH, Rancho Cañada was the setting for the annual installation dinner for the Carmel Host Lions Club.

This year, our local group received a number of awards, not least of which was outgoing president Clyde Klaumann's, "President of the Year" for the district. (This district covers clubs from King City all the way up to Sunnyvale and as far east as Hollister.)

This had been a complete surprise to him, and he was very moved by the honor.

Clyde got emotional during this evening's ceremony too, as he passed the president's hat to Liz Crooke.

But he explained the tears away by saying, "This lion has a heart!" (His wife Pam says he's the type of guy who always wears his heart on his sleeve.)

Another award was received by new member Phil Nelson for the commitment he showed in his first six months of membership.

Phil's a former chemical company executive who's lived all over and has heard enough jokes about his alleged "destruction of the environment." To that, he replies nonchalantly, "Now I take care of it!"

Then he adds, without missing a beat: "Except for the divots I make, of course!"

His wife Barbara is a real sweetheart, with a very quick laugh — definitely a must in our community.

Club District Governor Tom Scanlon, was thrilled to discover this evening that another member, Jan Jones, was actually an old friend she hadn't seen for more than 30 years.

Jan's dad used to have a restaurant, Hermann's, on Monterey's Alvarado Street and Joanne, who worked at a bank across the street, would regularly hang out there.

"It was such a small community at the time," Joanne said, "no one had any secrets!"

Joanne, by the way, was wearing a stunning gold lion's head pin that had been given to her by a group of "First Ladies" of the club when Tom was district governor.

Tom still remembers the time he had to attend a 7 a.m. breakfast meeting of a Lions Club in East San Jose. Definitely feeling the lack of sleep, he received a real wake-up jolt when, in the midst of his presentation, music started up and a hula dancer appeared before him. "Just some entertainment!"

Lion Elio Chiappe still speaks Italian fluently, despite having come over from Genoa more than 40 years ago.

Works by eminent member/artists gathered at Carmel Art Association

THE CARMEL Art Association has concurrent exhibits running through July 5, including the monthly Gallery Showcase featuring works of five artist/members, and a group show by a quartet of watercolor artists and a sculptor.

The Gallery Showcase presents works by Eleen Auvil, monoprints and wall sculpture; Frieda Golding, abstract watercolors; Carol Minou, still life subjects in oil; Jeff Smith, plein air oil paintings; and Philip Thorngate, landscapes in oil.

A group show by four award-winning watercolor artists and a sculptor will be exhibited in the Beardsley and center rooms, featuring Alicia Meheen, plein air painter; Margaret Roberts, founder of the Monterey Peninsula Watercolor Society in 1971; Wilda Northrop, painter of dramatic still life; Edward Norton Ward, author of "First Impressions — Sketching Nature in Watercolor" and sculptor Douglas Downs, whose bronze sculptures have been collected by former presidents Reagan, Nixon and Carter, King Carl Gustaf XVI and Queen Silvia of Sweden. This same group came together five years ago in a similar show.

The CAA is open daily from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and is located on Dolores Street between Fifth and Sixth avenues, Carmel. For information, call 624-6176.

MONUMENTAL EFFORT

Jeannie Oliveria, of St. Nick's Loft in The Barnyard, Carmel and award-winning quilt-maker, is displaying three originally designed and executed quilts — depicting scenes in Carmel-by-the-Sea, Pacific Grove and Monterey — at the family-owned Christmas shop. It takes this quilt lady about two years to design and make one such detailed quilt, completing one "block" a month. The public is invited to view the quilts from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. daily at 3696 The Barnyard, Carmel.

The four CAA painters and a sculptor shown here on Carmel Beach will have their works exhibited in a group show at the Carmel Art Association from June 8 through July 5. Back row: Edward Norton Ward, Wilda Northrop, foreground, left to right, Alicia Meheen, Margaret Roberts and Douglas Downs.

Member Dorothy Grimshaw, chatting with guest Carol Bryan, joked with a play on words, "I've been a lion all my life . . . I never tell the truth!"

But when asked about her favorite activities as a member, there was no mistaking her serious commitment to the various services the club provides.

Speaking of the district's health screening van that provides free eye exams, blood and hearing tests, and other essential checkups as it tours all over, Dorothy said, "I always find it so fulfilling to carry out such a service."

Wendy Banks admitted she and hubby Dave escaped last week's U.S. Open madness by taking a vacation in the Mother Lode country.

"It was very quiet and very beautiful," she said, adding, "And we missed all the excitement because we didn't even have a TV up there!"

Why to go, Clyde: you've got a terrific group there!

Jazz bassist Burgher "Buddy" Jones died June 9 at his Carmel Valley home.

Friends organize concerts in memory of bassist Buddy Jones

BUDDY JONES, "ambassador of jazz music" who performed regularly in venues close to his Carmel Valley home and who was the man who introduced the legendary Charlie "Yardbird" Parker to his future wife, Chan, died June 9 of pancreatic cancer.

Two jazz concerts are planned in Jones' honor. All proceeds from these events will benefit his family. Jones is survived by his wife, Lynn, and his sons, Calvin and Lyle, of Pennsylvania.

The first concert will take place at 2 p.m. Sunday, July 9 at Hidden Valley Music Seminars in Carmel Valley. The concert will feature Jones' friends: jazz trombone virtuoso Bill Watrous; songwriter and pianist Dave Frishberg; and Johnny Mandel, composer of such songs as "The Shadow of Your Smile," "Theme from M.A.S.H." and "Emily." Also on the bill are saxophonist George Young, guitarist Bruce Forman, bassist John Wiitala and drummer Vince Lateano.

The setting hasn't yet been chosen for a second concert, scheduled for 2 p.m. Sunday, July 23. It is scheduled to feature Boborough, Dave Frishberg, jazz vocalist Madeline Eastman and Jones' longtime sideman, flugelhorn player Jackie Coon.

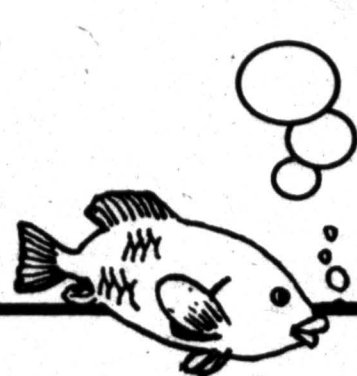

For tickets, call 649-3761.

A native of Arkansas, Jones was a classmate and childhood friend of the late Virginia Kelly, President Clinton's mother. He studied music as a boy, and at 17, his mother sent him to study at the University of Kansas City. It was there that he first heard alto saxophonist Charlie Parker rehearsing at the College Inn. "I believed when I first heard him, I knew I was in the presence of a genius," Jones told an interviewer. They became longtime friends.

Jones toured with no less than the Harry James and Tommy Dorsey bands and settled in Carmel Valley in 1971. He worked as a consultant with Clint Eastwood and Larry Niehaus on the film, "Bird." The Buddy Jones Trio, which included guitarist Forman and flugelhorn player Coon, played at the Plaza Linda in Carmel Valley Village for many years.

In 1996, Jones was inducted into the Arkansas Hall of Fame.

UNICORN'S 'EARNEST' HAS SINGULAR TALENT TO AMUSE

By LINDA and TOBY ROWLAND-JONES

AHHHH — THE BUNBERRY! Poor Anne, the arts editor of this fine publication. She has called us so many times to cover plays, and we have always had some excuse to not review as many as we would like. Did she send us to "The Importance of Being Earnest" as a sly reminder of the art of Bunberrying? Oh

Anne — now we have a whole pocketful of Bunberrys!

The art of the Bunberry is Oscar Wilde's wonderful way for his character, Algernon Moncrieff, played here by the young and verging on imperious Adam Flynn, to escape unpleasant or unwanted social situations. Bunberry is the fictitious character he can call upon at any time to fall seriously ill and

THEATER REVIEW

John Worthing is played admirably by Jody Gilmore, while Roo Hornady portrays the formidable Lady Bracknell in the Unicorn Theatre staging of 'The Importance of Being Earnest.'

need Algernon's immediate attention.

Playwright Oscar Wilde is at his best in "The Importance of Being Earnest." Peppered with delicious retorts, puns, witticisms and devilish prods at the absurdity of the English upper class, the play is also a timeless spoof of hypocrisy in social relations, literary pursuits and love.

"Earnest" offers a wonderful evening of mirth. And the acting isn't too bad either. The Unicorn Theatre, performing at the Carl Cherry Center for the Arts (until July 9), is a gregarious troupe, and obviously delighted with the play. There are some standout performances — particularly Roo Hornady as Lady Bracknell and Robert Colter as the Rev. Canon Chasuble.

However, much of the cast needs to work on their English marble-in-mouth accents. The two antagonists, Algernon (Flynn) and his chum, John Worthing, played admirably by Jody Gilmore, battle back and forth to become the Earnest of their lady-loves. Gwendolyn (Kalyn Shubnell) delivers with a breathless dry humor that had the audience holding its sides with laughter — sort of the ultimate spoof of the upper-class Victorian lady.

Perhaps because the play takes place on a small stage and is peopled with very large characters, it is in the paired scenes that the dialogue really sings. In these moments with the lovers, the new-found sisters Cecily (Kellie Crain) and Gwendolyn and with the would-be mother-in-law, one can really absorb Wilde's brilliance.

We're certain that the cast of "The Importance of Being Earnest" will continue to rise to the outstanding material. Don't miss it!

THINK OF IT AS A PICNIC WITH REALLY GREAT SERVICE

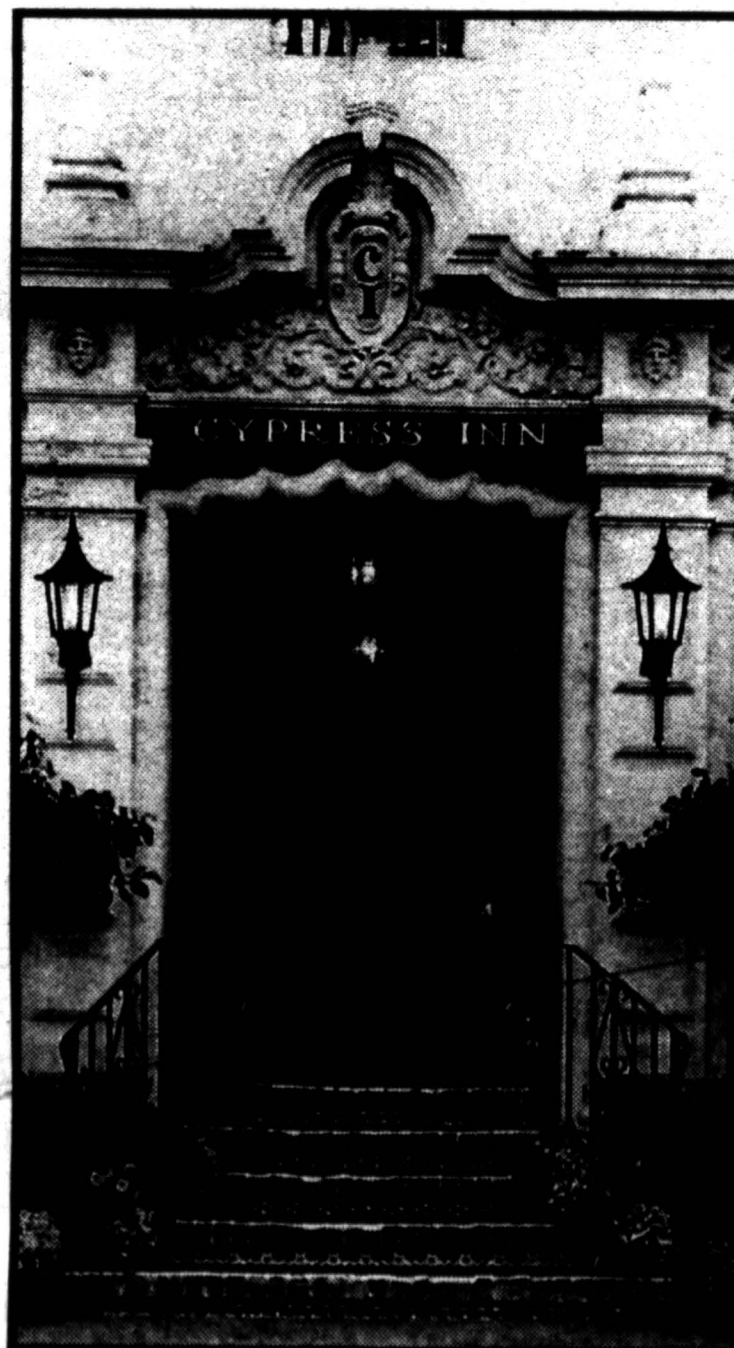

Sure, a picnic on the beach is lots of fun but what about the sand on your pickle and lugging all that stuff back to the car? At California Market, it's ocean air, fabulous views and wonderful menus for a hearty breakfast, a casual lunch or an intimate dinner by the sea.

Dine outdoors on the heated redwood deck or indoors by the pot-bellied stove. Daily specials are created from the freshest local ingredients. With cocktails, California wines by the glass, a wide selection of beers, it's the casual side of the renowned food and service of Highlands Inn with an atmosphere all its own. Open daily from 7:30 am - 10:00 pm.

'Jackie Chan of restaurant world' lands in Monterey

HOG'S BREATH owner Kaiser Morcus was able to turn over $13,500 to well-known Carmel waiter Ernie Oslan, who suffered a stroke several months ago. Morcus held a $100 per person al fresco buffet in the patio area of The Hog's Breath earlier this month — preceded by elaborate and superb hors d'oeuvres and drinks — and donated 100 percent of the intake. Bravo, Morcus! Executive chef of The Hog is Mike Lamb; Valerie Lamb is the manager. Before resettling in Carmel, this husband and wife team left Tahoe to join Kaiser Morcus at his Kaiser Grill restaurants in Palm Springs and Palm Desert.

AT LAST! Benihana Restaurant has opened at Heritage Harbor, Monterey (136 Oliver St.), location for many years of the renowned Ginza restaurant. Founder Rocky Aoki was there last Friday with son Kevin Aoki, and in his welcoming address to the press, touchingly remembered his mother and father, who inspired him in his early years with their work ethic in their restaurant near Tokyo. He opened his first four-table restaurant in NYC in 1964; now Aoki's Benihana is an international restaurant chain combining Japanese cuisine with performance art of knife-wielding tableside chefs. Today there are 70 restaurants worldwide — Monterey's being the latest with 14 tables seating eight diners each.

The at-table performance is just as enthralling to children as it is to groups, singles and couples. Rocky told Morgan the secret of his success is to "work hard and have street smarts."

Rocky Aoki is the Jackie Chan of the restaurant world: He was a member of Japan's Olympic wrestling team; won a grueling 1,300-mile Milan-to-Moscow road rally challenge driving his vintage Rolls-Royce; was a champion powerboat racer; and flew in the Double Eagle V helium balloon with famed balloonist Ben Abruzzo from Japan to California over 6,000 miles of open sea. Whatta guy!

DOORBELL DINING is the name of Dave Stewart's new restaurant delivery service. You can find out more by calling 384-3663.

GERNOT LEITZINGER has closed his highly regarded Gernot's Victoria House Restaurant at 19th and Lighthouse, Pacific Grove, after 12 years in that beautiful yellow Victorian house, and a total of 33 years here in the restaurant business.

Gernot, a native of Kitzbühl, Austria, opened two Holiday Inns here on the peninsula as food and beverage director. He and his wife Rosemarie created and ran The Swiss Tavern for two years in Su Vecino Court, Carmel, then operated The Old Europe in Pacific Grove from '75 to '88. Then from 1988 to May of this year, they lived in and operated Gernot's Victoria House Restaurant, a multi-level, many-chambered mansion.

Now Gernot has sold the beautiful structure to a private individual. He and Rosemarie will stay on the Monterey Peninsula. In a telephone conversation with Morgan this week, Gernot said he wanted to thank patrons for all the support given them over all the years, and "for the happiness they brought us."

And we thank you, Gernot and Rosemarie, for the exquisite dinners you prepared for your loyal following.

SOME THINGS never change, such as The Terrace Grill and its happy hour at La Playa Hotel — Eighth and Camino Real — which goes on, year after year, as the meeting place for Carmelites. Kevin Washburn, director of food and beverage, tells Morgan that while the free happy hour buffet will continue — somewhat truncated — a brand new bar menu has been created, with appetizers ranging from $4 (for a "Castroville Blossom" — an artichoke served chilled or grilled and served with red pepper aioli) to $6.95 (for lobster "Thai-Mole.") These and lots more tempting tidbits are the creation of Bunyan Fortune, chef de cuisine.

Legends of the blues expected this weekend at fairgrounds

THE 15TH ANNUAL Monterey Bay Blues Festival is scheduled for this weekend (June 23-25) at the historic Monterey County Fairgrounds and once again offers a wealth of regional and national blues talent performing nonstop on three stages. Headlining Friday's concert in the main arena, Ashford and Simpson have been cranking out hit records together for more than 20 years and have collected 22 gold and platinum records and more than 50 ASCAP awards along the way. Also scheduled for Friday's kick-off concert: young blues guitar talent Deborah Coleman and daughter of legendary John Copeland, Shemekia Copeland plus Peggy Scott Adams.

Cephas and Wiggins

In addition to all of the music in the main arena, more than 40 bands will be playing at both the Garden and President's stages. My choices for the weekend include the above mentioned Deborah Coleman (10 p.m. at the Garden Stage), the always fun-lovin' guitarist Elvin Bishop (also at 10 p.m. on the President's Stage), Texas guitar slinger Cookie McGee (Saturday 1:10 p.m., Garden Stage), vocalist Charlie Jene from Long Beach (Saturday at 7:50 on the Garden Stage), delta bluesmen Cephas & Wiggins (1:10 on the Garden Stage) and five-time W.C. Handy Award nominee Carl Weathersby (Sunday at 5:20 p.m. on the President's Stage). For ticket info call 394-2652 or visit the festival's web site at www.montereyblues.com.

FAIR SPONSORS BAND COMPETITION

THE MONTEREY County Fair will once again sponsor a band competition with a few changes and added features. This year's event is co-sponsored by local independent newspaper Coast Weekly and has been renamed the Ultimate Band Competition. The competition is open to music groups outside of Monterey County and is being promoted throughout California.

Entry forms may be picked up at the Monterey County Fairgrounds or on the web at www.bestofcal.com. Deadline is Monday, June 26. All genres are encouraged to enter. First-round finalists will be selected by a panel of judges and will perform at local venues on July 20, 21, 27 and 28. Finalists will perform at the fair August 15-19 and will vie for bragging rights, cash and recording time at Carmel Digital Sound. For more information and details call me (Entertainment Chairperson) at 384-2609.

Cookie McGee

the dynamic duo of organist Jimmy McGriff and saxophonist Hank Crawford.

Saturday afternoon's concert in the main arena (my personal choice) includes the return of the Neville Brothers, legendary Little Jimmy King, local favorite Sista Monica and major blues star in the making, harmonica ace Rod Piazza.

Saturday evening's show features blues pioneers Little Milton and Johnny Otis plus last year's sensation, guitarist Lucky Peterson and the always delightful vocalist (and another local favorite) Barbara Morrison.

The weekend wraps up in the main arena with a special concert featuring some of the brightest female vocalists in the world of blues, including Candy Kane; Trudy Lynne; Dorothy Moore (filling in for the ailing Ruth Brown);

Can tomatoes be used in all seven courses? Why not? Club XIX served caviar with each course in a thrilling seven-course caviar dinner earlier this year. Tomato guru Gary Ibsen will present a short comparison of a variety of tomatoes. The menu includes tomato carpaccio topped with Osetra caviar, tomato and summer truffle fritter, turbot filet poached in tomato water served with baby artichokes and a flambé tomato consommé, and roasted Colorado lamb rack with tomato crust. All tomato-lovers are welcome at $150 per person, which includes beverages, tax and gratuity. Reservations are required and can be made by calling Club XIX at 625-8519.

DENNIS LEVETT of Cypress Inn Investments, got the go-ahead from the planning commission last week to construct a 60-seat restaurant adjoining the Cypress on Lincoln between Ocean and Seventh, Carmel. The lunch and dinner full-line restaurant will feature California cuisine. More about this later.

THE SAME planning commission turned down the Fourth Avenue Pasta House's request for a second business sign. As we all know, Fourth Avenue is just a tad off the main tourist walking path and needs a little something extra to draw attention to the restaurant, which is on the corner of Fourth and San Carlos. The entrance is on San Carlos, but the Fourth Avenue side of the building has only windows. The city's hard and fast rule allows only one sign — at the entrance. The commissioners, while seeming sympathetic to part-owner Charles Duncan's pleas, just couldn't see their way clear to making an exception: "We have no alternative..." — "We have no choice..." they said.

Poppycock! If a restaurant here has a crying need for a second sign, why can't the commissioners allow one as a special circumstance? After all, as Duncan told the planners, "The unusual circumstances are calling it the Fourth Avenue Pasta House and having people driving or walking on Fourth Avenue not seeing anything identifying the restaurant." Why can't the city help, rather than hinder, the success of Carmel restaurants? Isn't it time to review these rigid rules?

Government's first principles

LAST MONTH, Carmel voters overwhelmingly approved a bond measure to improve the facilities at their rundown schools. The public, apparently, was no longer willing to have its children spend 180 days a year in antiquated and dilapidated school buildings. Extensive publicity about the dreadful deficiencies at Carmel High, for example, helped the $20 million bond measure pass.

But at the same time the people of Carmel are worrying about sending their children to an inadequate school, parents from surrounding communities are evidently trying to sneak their children into the Carmel school district. Last week, district officials announced a strict crackdown on out-of-towners enrolling their kids here. Proof of residency will henceforth be required before a textbook can be opened, they said.

The earnest wish of parents to send their children to Carmel for their education results from the fact that, while the buildings may be rundown, there are many advantages at the area's schools. Students consistently score in the top 10 percent on statewide tests. Vandalism sometimes happens, but violence rarely does. Gangs don't spend a lot of time recruiting new members in Carmel. Handing in your homework promptly isn't something to be ashamed of at our schools.

But while Carmel schools may be the envy of some districts, they could still be greatly improved.

And the fact that some other public schools are viewed by neighboring parents as places to be avoided is a shameful example of our government's failure to fulfill its most basic responsibilities, while it spends millions on things that are much less important.

In some of our state's poor communities, citizens are too fearful to leave their homes after dark. All too often, innocent people are injured or killed in their own homes by stray bullets fired from passing cars. Schools are training grounds for hoodlums, not scholars.

The people of California have shown over and over again at the polls that they want to preserve the basic principles of their state.

The first of these principles should be to guarantee public safety, making it possible for citizens of every community in the state to live free of fear. And the second should be to provide every young person — no matter their race or economic status — with a high quality, free education until they're 18 years old.

Until those two goals have been achieved, government should put some of its obsessions on the back burner.

No need to re-visit short-term issue

Dear Editor:

There have been two very good letters to the editor about why Carmel should not revisit the city's ordinance regarding short-term rentals. I would like to add to their comments.

Having lived in Lake Arrowhead, California, for eight years, I have had ample opportunity to observe the adverse effects of short-term rentals.

The major problems stem from the fact that, although one family rents the property, in reality, usually two or more families are involved. In addition, the friends of these families visit for a few nights. This results in a lot of noise, both day and night.

Also, they always seem to park in the driveways of the surrounding homes. The biggest problem of all is the trash generated by all these people. They fill the available trash cans, and then dump the remainder around the trash can, or in and around the neighbors' trash cans.

This trash is then spread everywhere by the wind, raccoons and other animals.

I can see very little benefit to either the Carmel residents or to the business community by changing this ordinance. Let us not spend our time revisiting issues that have been resolved to the satisfaction of the majority of our population, and only benefits absentee owners and rental management companies.

Lee Eldred, Carmel

CALL

champion — whoever it was — and the best number to reach him wouldn't be the Pebble Beach switchboard or anything like that. It would be my cell phone."

But things didn't work out that way.

After his final putt, Woods was interviewed live by NBC, ESPN and the Golf Channel. Then he was whisked to the media center near the Polo Field where 400 or 500 reporters awaited their turn with the golf phenom.

"I realized I couldn't stay with Tiger," Harper said, "because we were behind schedule and I was due at the Beach and Tennis Club" where a ceremony called The Toast to the Champion was about to begin.

The impending Presidential phone call had been kept a secret — even from Woods — in case Mr. Clinton had an emergency to deal with and had to cancel. As the time for the call neared, Harper had no choice. He gave his cell phone to Craig Smith, a media relations official with the USGA, along with instructions about handling the Big Call.

"I told him, whatever you do, don't turn the phone off because the President is going to call to talk to Tiger," Harper said.

But Smith, who stood near Woods while he answered questions, instinctively switched the phone off when it started ringing, and the White House couldn't get through.

"I was on the stage at the Beach and Tennis club and my name was about to be called to accept an award as championship director — it was my small moment of triumph — when one of the staff people at the club tapped me on the shoulder and said, 'The White House is on the phone for you,'" Harper said. "They told me the President was waiting but my cell phone wasn't answering — they kept getting my voice mail!"

Harper told the White House to call the media center and ask for Craig Smith. That didn't work either.

Finally, after Woods finished his lengthy news conference — with the President probably watching on TV at the White House — Smith turned the cell phone back on. At that moment it rang again.

"It was perfect because as Tiger left the stage he got the call from Clinton, and it was a private call, just the two of them, which is how it should be," Harper said.

The Presidential phone call capped the triumphant weekend: Woods' amazing mastery of the game of golf, the huge TV ratings and the fabulous weather.

"The event catapulted the whole region to additional respect and prominence and I think that's good for everybody," said Pebble Beach co-owner Peter Ueberroth.

"It was something that will never be duplicated — the 100th U.S. Open, Tiger Woods' play and Pebble Beach," said Paul Spengler, who served as General Chairman of the Open.

"We were prepared for everything, I think, except averaging 3 hours of sleep a night," Harper said. He praised everyone involved for their "Herculean effort."

Thursday's fog had TV commentators gloomily predicting that the weather could disrupt the entire tournament. But it turned out to be a blessing, according to P. B. Co. President John Chadwell, because it stretched out play Friday and Saturday from early morning to after sunset, increasing live TV coverage to 37 hours.

When play was suddenly halted Thursday afternoon — Tiger Woods' last shot that day was a 30-foot birdie putt on 12 — Spengler and Harper were forced to put their "evacuation plan" into effect. Instead of an orderly finish in groups of three at 18, golfers had to be collected from all over the course — and returned to their respective holes Friday morning. The whole process had to be repeated Friday evening and Saturday morning. "Just about everybody had to be a shuttle driver," Harper said.

Fred Couples, on his way to tee-off Friday morning, asked the amiable van driver who picked him up if he worked at Pebble Beach.

"Yeah," answered the gentleman at the wheel.

"What do you do?" Couples asked.

"I'm the President of the company," answered John Chadwell who, along with many of his fellow executives, was drafted as a bus driver. Couples took his opportunity to chide the hotel management.

"The players don't make that much money so you should lower your room rates," he said.

up doing some nighttime riding towards the end of the route. She plans to attach glow sticks to Bea for night-riding.

"We have 24 hours to finish, and people usually ride at least a quarter of it in the dark," she said. The date of the ride is chosen with night riding in mind, falling near the full moon in July or August every year since it was began in 1955.

Many riders help ease the strain on their horses by doing some of the work themselves, North said.

"You try to get off and run the downhill if you can, and tail the uphill — hang on to the horse's tail and walk up. Pulling you up is not a big deal for the horse," compared to having you on its back, she added. But Bea's habit of kicking means she's not trustworthy enough to tail up the hills and North doubts she'd have the strength anyway.

While she spends time and money outfitting Bea perfectly — from Easy Boots to keep her from losing shoes ("She flings her shoes like a discus thrower in the Olympics," North said.), to finding the perfect tack, to contouring saddle pads to prevent painful white spots from cropping up on Bea's back — North rarely bestows the same treatment on herself.

This year, because she'll be doing some walking, she finally splurged. She bought an $85 pair of trail shoes at The Treadmill.

North has her strategy down, her horse conditioned and her team in place, ready for bear.

"It's one of the biggest goals in my lifetime," she said.

Amnesty housing gets short-term thumbs-up in P.G.

By KIRSTIE WILDE

GRANNY ISN'T going to have to move out of her illegal apartment in Pacific Grove, at least not for six months.

The P.G. City Council voted 4 to 1 on June 21 to give both owners and renters of illegal units — converted garages, detached cottages or whatever — a six-month breather from enforcement.

During that time, the planning department will apply for a grant from the State Department of Housing and Community Development to study the issue of illegal housing units in the city, which make up much of the town's low-income housing stock.

"It's not everything we hoped for, but it is certainly a substantial step in the right direction to help people of limited income find shelter in P.G.," said landlord, realtor and affordable-housing advocate Larry Scholink.

Mayor Sandy Koffman, who has a 600-square-foot legal "granny unit" on her property, voted for the measure. "My parents live in the secondary unit; my dad is disabled and they are very low income," she said. "When I think about this issue, my parents' faces are in front of me."

Koffman said the council also directed the planning commission to work on how the city could legalize detached cottages on larger lots, such as her neighborhood on Crocker. "I think the tiny, detached units can add to the ambiance, rather than have much bigger houses on the large lots," she said.

The interim measure passed Wednesday will delay enforcement on 18 pending cases of illegal units in P.G. All will be inspected for health and safety violations, according to community development director Dennis Boehlje, and the landlords will be given the following choices:

- Voluntarily remove the kitchens or other improvements from the unit which create the violation.

- Apply for permits or other remedies to legalize the unit.

- Evict the tenants after six months if they do not qualify under HUD's "very low income guidelines." The guidelines say a single person can make no more than $17,600 a year to qualify; a couple, $20,100; a family of three, $22,650. The landlord could charge maximum rents of $440 for a single person, $503 for a couple, $566 for a family of three.

- Rent a vacant unit to a very low income household at very low income rents, but just during the interim period.

If the landlord raises the rent, or rents to someone who doesn't qualify as having very low income, the city will respond with "full enforcement procedures," according to Boehlje.

The vote on the interim ordinance was 4 to 1, with Morrie Fisher and Dan Davis absent and Steve Honegger dissenting. Honegger told The Pine Cone he voted no because he thinks amnesty will open up "a can of worms" and that the situation now, where enforcement takes place only after a complaint, is working fine. "We should leave well enough alone," Honegger said. "There are so many of those units in this town; if you start trying to give amnesty, you're just asking for trouble and are probably going to have less housing than you did before."

Honegger said he is in favor of looking at legalizing some detached illegal units on lots larger than 8,000 square feet. That issue will come up for a public hearing in July.

Meanwhile, Scholink's unit, which is occupied by a young couple about to have a baby, does not qualify under the very low income guidelines. He said he would lower their rents rather than evict them and he's hoping the city won't require him to kick them out.

DEPARTMENTS

law enforcement agencies as a result of Proposition 132, a measure approved by voters in 1993 that earmarked a half-percent of California's sales tax to help fund local police and sheriff's departments, fire protection, county district attorneys, county probation and county jail operations.

County administrative analyst Nicholas Chiulos recommended supervisors approve the distribution of $1,848,640 to 17 county agencies and three volunteer departments.

The Monterey County Fire District and Volunteer Fire Company Association executive board had already unanimously approved the agencies' requests for funding.

Of those, the Peninsula agencies include:

■ The Big Sur Volunteer Fire Company and its 50 trained volunteers, who provide fire suppression, medical and rescue services to 60 miles of Highway 1 coastline, will use $42,427 to pay for insurance, training and safety gear.

■ The Cachagua Fire Protection District, serving 900 people in a 100-square-mile rural area east of Carmel Valley, will pay for insurance and add to its building reserve fund with the $22,996 in tax money.

■ The Carmel Highlands Fire Protection District, which covers 2,900 residents living in six square miles, will use $127,280 to pay for shift firefighters' salaries, health insurance and workers compensation.

■ The Carmel Valley Fire Protection District, serving 5,300 residents in 12 square miles of upper Carmel Valley, will use $121,220 to help pay for three firefighter/engineer/paramedic positions.

■ The Cypress Fire Protection District, covering the 6 square miles of the lower Carmel Valley and Jacks Peak areas home to 9,000 residents, will receive $162,755 for operating expenses and increased fire protection/public information efforts.

■ The Mid Carmel Valley Fire Protection District, which serves 6,700 residents in eight square miles, will use $141,185 to pay a captain and a firefighter, as well as to purchase new equipment.

■ The Mid Coast Volunteer Fire Company responds to fires, accidents and medical emergencies in the area between Carmel Highlands' and Big Sur's jurisdictions. It will use the $22,996 for a new fire engine pump motor, self-contained breathing apparatus and protective gear. The company will also get $33,350 in reserved funds for construction of a community fire station.

■ The Pebble Beach Community Services District, serving 6,250 residents in 8.4 square miles, will receive $129,776 to cover operating expenses and increase fire prevention/public information efforts.

The funds will be distributed to the agencies in July and August, according to Chiulos' report to the county.

Residents of dozens of Monterey Peninsula communities will get better fire protection after an allocation of more than $1.8 million of sales tax money earmarked by a 1993 ballot measure for public safety.

County Counsel's summary of P.B. initiative

THE MONTEREY County Counsel, Adrienne Grover, last week released her summary of the initiative proposed for the November ballot by the Pebble Beach Co.

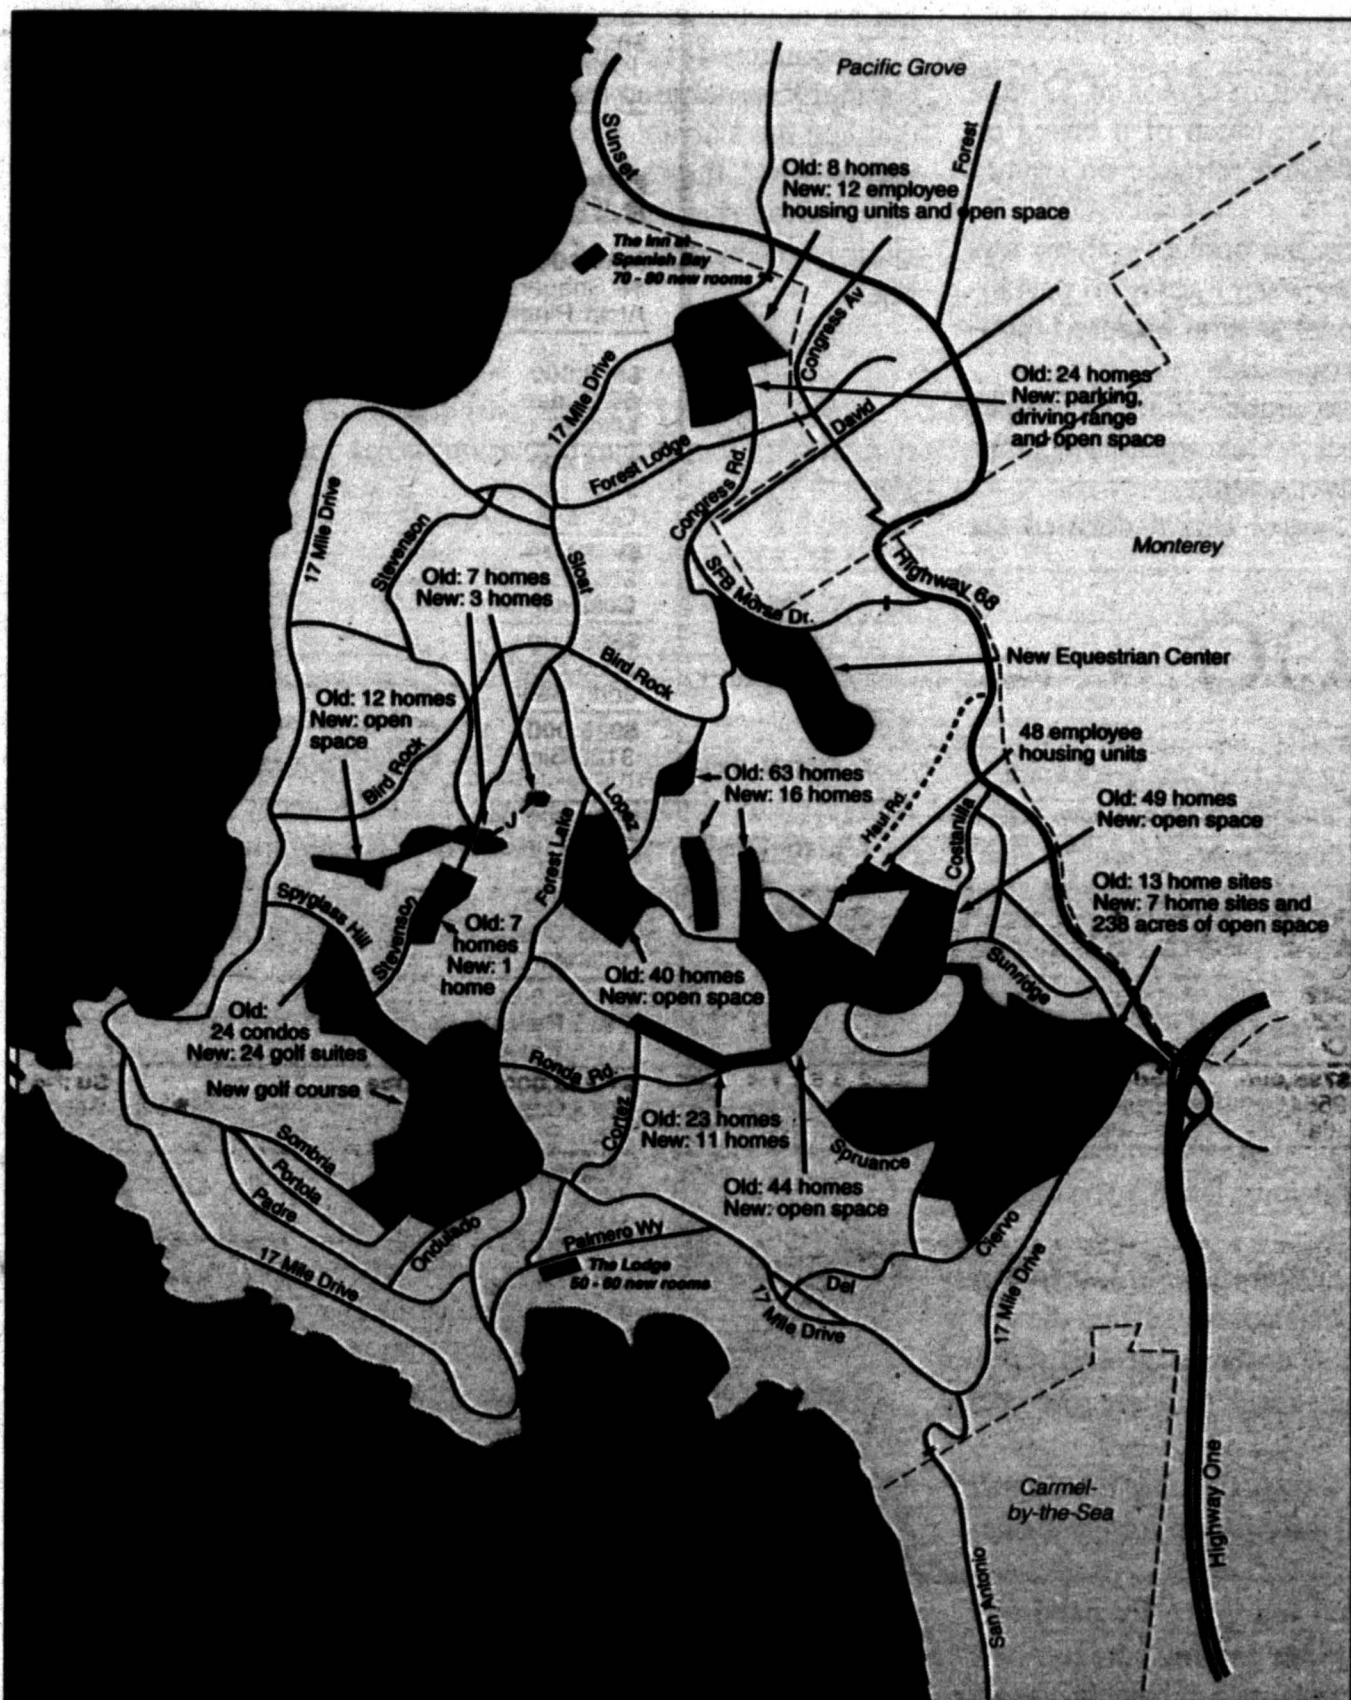

The initiative would re-zone large portions of Del Monte Forest for open space, eliminating most of the 890 home sites allowed under current zoning.

The company also announced June 6 that it will seek permits for about 160 new hotel rooms at The Lodge and at the Inn at Spanish Bay. The hotel rooms, however, are not part of the ballot measure.

The following is the text of the county counsel's summary:

An initiative ordinance amending the Del Monte Forest area Land Use Plan, the Monterey County Coastal Implementation Plan, the Monterey County Zoning Plan, and the Monterey County Housing Element to reduce allowed residential development and increase open space and forest habitat in the del monte forest area.

The Del Monte Forest Area Land Use

This map shows the changes announced June 6 to the Pebble Beach Company's plan for development in Del Monte Forest, including the dedication as open space of hundreds of acres (areas L, I, H, G, P, Q and R) formerly planned for 151 homes.

Plan currently provides for new residential development in certain areas of up to 890 new homes. This initiative would change the land use designation on approximately 425 acres of land in the Del Monte Forest area from a residential land use classification to an open space classification. This change would reduce the amount of residential development allowed in these areas from 890 new homes to no more than 38 new homes.

This initiative would also provide for the creation of up to 12 employee housing units, to add to the 48 housing units for which a vesting tentative map application is currently on file.

The Del Monte Forest Area Land Use Plan currently imposes a "Resource Constraint" zoning overlay on certain lands until water and sewer capacity are sufficient to serve development and until highway capacity and circulation solutions have been agreed upon and adopted. This initiative would remove the resource constraint zoning overlay on the lands where all water, sewer, and traffic constraints have been satisfied, as provided in the initiative.

This initiative would rezone property to provide for the relocation of an existing equestrian center onto land formerly used as a sand quarry, and for location of visitor serving uses on approximately five acres of land formerly zoned for new residential development.

Future open space uses (defined as forest habitat, shoreline and recreation) must be consistent with the standards contained in the Open Space Advisory Committee Management Plan which is incorporated in the Del Monte Forest Area Land Use Plan.

Passage of this initiative would not approve any new development. All new development occurring in the Del Monte Forest area will be subject to environmental and public review.

If this initiative qualifies to be placed on the ballot and if a majority of the voters voting on the measure vote in its favor, the initiative shall become a valid and binding ordinance of the County of Monterey, which could not be repealed or amended except by a vote of the people. This initiative is intended to be consistent with the California Coastal Act and if a court determines that there is an inconsistency, the entire initiative would be of no further force or effect. The initiative also provides that in the event any portion is invalidated by a court on other grounds, the validity of the remaining portions would not be affected.

Robles Del Rio Lodge can sell water credits, supes decide

By MARY BROWNFELD

A LONGSTANDING plan to sell Cal-Am water freed up by the historic renovation of a Carmel Valley inn barely made it through the Board of Supervisors this week.

By a 3 to 2 margin, with Dave Potter voting for approval, the supervisors okayed Glenn Gurries' plan to sell water credits he gained by drilling a well at Robles del Rio Lodge and severing his Cal-Am connection.

The well saves nine acre-feet of water per year, according to Gurries. Of that, a mandatory 15 percent goes back to the water management district to reduce water use, and Gurries agreed to hand over another 15 percent to the county.

He will be permitted to sell the remainder to residential users by using the county as a go-between. Water management district regulations permit commercial-to-residential transfers only when a jurisdiction operates as a conduit.

Potter said that he opposed the county's involvement in a program that will probably make water available to the highest bidder rather than to those who have been waiting the longest. But he supported the Robles Del Rio Lodge transfer because it has long been a part of Gurries' plan.

"I have seen this project at the board level before, and have always known the water credit was part of the issue, and we have allowed it to proceed," he said. "This man was led in under fair existing practices and policies — my problem is with the county being the agency processing those transfers."

Potter made the motion to approve the transfers, providing the water is kept within the Cal-Am service area.

County staff had recommended against approving Gurries' request, arguing that there was no actual water saving involved because the new well at the Robles Del Rio Lodge took water from the same aquifer tapped by Cal-Am, which has been ordered to drastically reduce pumping from the Carmel River.

County administrative officer Sally Reed also said the county should "refuse to be the conduit of water allocation transfers based on financial transactions between the applicant and others."

Gurries argued he has already spent in excess of $2 million on the historic renovation project, much of it based on the county's promises of assistance and reliance on county policies regarding water transfers.

"This is a legitimate program on the books — there was never any indication that the county wasn't going to participate in the program — and I've spent several hundred thousand relying on the program," Gurries said.

His attorney, John Bridges, also argued that the Robles del Rio well taps into the Hitchcock Creek aquifer, separated by bedrock from the Carmel River aquifer.

"The State Water Resources Control Board defined the Carmel River and specifically excluded Robles Del Rio," he said, adding that both the state board and the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District have said the Robles del Rio project will not be affected by any changes in the water transfer credit regulations.

"If these agencies want to reexamine [water transfer credits], that's fine," he said. "But they have decided we should be allowed to go forward."

Several residents and Carmel Valley Village business people spoke in favor of the proposal — some because it would free up water for residential use, and others because the historic renovation will improve the Village.

"There are some poor tortured souls out there who are waiting for water," said Tom Bruce, a Monterey County resident. "They have been good stewards of the land, and are now being forced to sit on vacant land that they can't develop. This is a blessing not only for the Robles Del Rio Lodge, but for landowners hoping to have a home."

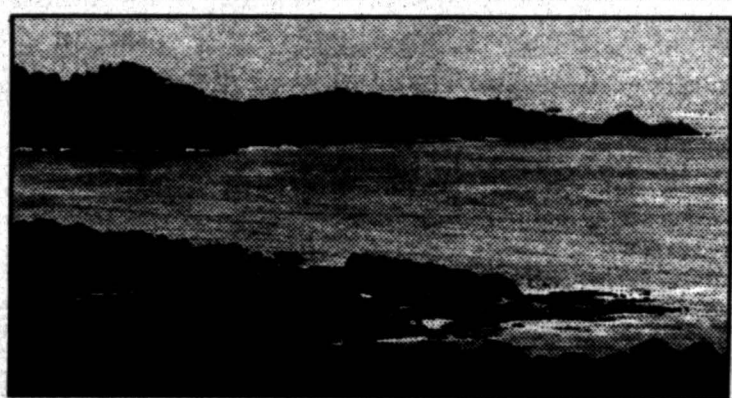

Opponents Fran Farina and Patricia Bernardi of Save Our Carmel River argued that letting Gurries sell his water would damage the Carmel River aquifer. They oppose water transfers because, they said, such transfers just increase water use.

The board voted 3 to 2 to approve Gurries' plan, with chair Lou Calcagno and supervisor Judy Pennycook dissenting.
